

I live in Indiana and we have the Indiana No Call List, which I have my name on. The reason I did this is because I am tired of getting unsolicited phone calls. When I would come home from work, some days there would be 25 calls on my caller ID from people who didn't leave a message - so they certainly were telemarketers!

The FCC should NOT implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The Indiana Telephone Privacy law has been a blessing. I now very rarely receive a call from any of these people.

I am now currently unemployed and am job hunting. Since I am now at home more than I used to be during the day, I do not have the time to field calls from unwanted callers and weed them out from legitimate calls regarding my job search. It is very important to me that I don't have to deal with telemarketers.

This law was enacted in Indiana to protect our PRIVACY. DO NOT implement any proposal that would interfere with OUR LAW!
